Yes, on the surface television sports casting seems like a dream job. You're rubbing elbows with well-known athletes and even enjoying a certain celebrity status of your own. But it also involves a great deal of sacrifice. Would you move to Scottsbluff, Nebraska, or the Quad Cities in Iowa to cover high school sports and junior college athletics? Mark Meisenheimer takes you to the small markets, introducing you to the men and women who have worked their way up the broadcast ladder. Truth is stranger (and often more entertaining) than fiction, and No Pants Required proves it. Whether you have sports casting aspirations of your own or you're simply a fan, you'll love this insiders look at the industry. This item ships from multiple locations.
