PROGRAMME OF RECITATIONS FOR THE GRAMMAR GRADE OF AN IMPERFECTLY GRADED SCHOOL., are enrolled in the high school. When this law has been established for a particular school, however, it is in most cases subject to but slight variations, and may lead us to quantitative results within quite narrow limits. This general law of attendance has an important bearing on the subject now under consideration. While we are certain that increments in attendance will chiefly affect the lower classes, we are not able to predict what special part of the school will require an additional teacher, as successive additions are made to the enrollment; but as the present purpose is chiefly to illustrate the general manner in which a provisional grading is to be modified to meet the requirements of growth, it will be sufficient to follow the general law which governs school attendance. Let us, then, suppose that our village school has gradually increased in numbers till each teacher has sixty pupils, and it has become necessary to employ additional help. As this increase in numbers will chiefly affect the primary grade, the division which is now required may be made as follows: Let the D and C classes of the primary grade constitute one school; the B and A classes of the same grade, and the D class of the grammar grade, the second school; and the C, B, and A classes of the grammar grade, the third school....
